Hiring Manager,

I have a wide range of wisdom, skills and abilities that are beyond my age. I learn fast, pay attention, and never stop trying my best. I have unmatched optimism and an understanding that happiness comes from a sense of accomplishment. I do better every day than I did the day before, and I apply this to every aspect of my daily life—at work and away from work. The way I see it, I can't lose a competition against myself, and in my opinion, anyone getting worse at doing something they do every day should never work beside me.

For three years straight, I worked 70 hours a week, every single week. That included every holiday and every weekend. I don't need to be told twice to pick up a tool, and I am focused on consistently improving my production and technical expertise every day I'm on the clock.

With a background that includes years of experience in different trades, industries, technologies, and sometimes languages, I have the physical stamina for the field and the technical mindset to solve the problems that slow a crew down. You won't have to worry about whether I'm showing up or whether I can handle the hours. If you need someone reliable who knows how to put in a real day's work and keep the pace moving, I'm ready to get started.
